Civil service, faculty salary increases drag

STUART TART
Editor in chief

Laurent Gosselin, Eastern's University Professionals of Illinois president, said Sunday that President Stan Rives displays more "vigor" in correcting administrative salary inequities than in correcting those of faculty and civil service employees.

"It seems in the administration they can speak of equity and speak of pay raises in one fell swoop," Gosselin said. When it comes to faculty pay raises, however, it takes "years and years" of discussion, he added.

Gosselin, along with the leaders of several civil service unions and of the civil service council, were asked during the past week for their reactions to the salary increases awarded to two Eastern administrators.

Although non-negotiated administrative and professional employees only received 1 percent across-the-board salary increases and 1.75 percent average market, merit and equity increases, Vice President for Institutional Advancement Stephen Falk received a 9.89 percent increase and Judith Anderson, director of affirmative action and cultural diversity, received a more than 7 percent salary boost.

"I think the positions they're in helped them get a bigger raise," said Danny Cross, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 981, which represents approximately 218 employees. "Why do you separate two people and make them special? I think that's what the campus is asking."

"Basically, we don't like it, but there's nothing we can do about it," said Kenny Warren, union steward of Teamsters No. 26. However, he added that union members have not complained to him about it.

"I do find it unusual these raises were implemented in the way they were in the sense that no equal effort was made on the part of the administration to recognize inequities in faculty and civil service pay," Gosselin said. "I think it's a real affront to hard-working faculty and a real blow to morale."

Rives, in a statement released through University Relations, said the two administrators' raises were partly designed to bring them closer to market equity and were partly promotion increases.

"It's a problem that the president uses changes in titles as justification for increased pay, when I don't believe there are extra responsibilities," Gosselin said.

Rives called Falk's title change from vice president for development to vice president for institutional advancement a promotion, as well as Anderson's title change from director of affirmative action to her present title.

However, Gosselin pointed out that faculty promotions are "a long, drawn-out process" in which individuals are evaluated several times by peers and by administrators before they can advance.

"A person (faculty member) might take at least five years to get there," he said. "Each year (the individual) is rigidly evaluated by peers. By the time (they are) promoted, (they have been) evaluated by five or six levels of administration."

"When it comes to administration, it appears to just take a title change," Gosselin added. "I find that process unreasonable; more bluntly, I find that process unfair."

He added that faculty promotions currently involve increases of only $100 a month. Falk's salary increase was $540 a month, while Anderson received a $290 a month increase.

Anita Thomas, president of AFSCME Local 1271, said she has questions about the two individuals' salary increases.

"I don't know exactly why two individuals were singled out for (large) increases," she said. "I

Armstrong receives promotion at AASCU

By MIKE CHAMBERS
Staff writer

A former Eastern administrator, who was fired in connection with alleged hiring violations at Eastern almost a year ago, now oversees hiring and firing for a Washington D.C.-based special interest group to which Eastern subscribes.

Verna Armstrong, former vice president for accounting and finance, was recently named senior vice president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

Armstrong's duties as second in command of this advocate group include personnel matters, accounting and collecting membership dues, said Gay Clyburn, spokeswoman for the association. Armstrong has been with the association since leaving Eastern in March 1991.

Armstrong assumed the post of senior vice president with the higher education advocate group on Jan. 23 after serving as a senior consultant and then acting head of educational resources for almost a year.

Verna Armstrong

Her recent post was formed by new president James Appleberry when he took charge of the association in July.

Armstrong left Eastern following allegations of nepotism after it was discovered that her son, Scott Walker, was hired to a newly-formed $32,700 administrative post under her jurisdiction. A subsequent investigation by the Board of Governors uncovered at least three other questionable hirings, but only ruled that "poor judgment" was used in the four hirings, administrators close to the investigation said.

Under BOG guidelines, university vice presidents with six or more years of service, as Armstrong had, have to be given a 12-month notice of termination. Armstrong was given her notice in March 1991, and following her notice, went to Washington to work for one year as an unpaid senior consultant for AASCU.

Armstrong has still received her $81,540 salary from Eastern during that year, but her salary is due to end at the end of February.

In a phone interview Friday, Armstrong would not say what her new salary as senior vice president is, but she has the same duties she held as the acting vice president for educational resources.

The AASCU acts as a lobbying and research group for 375 colleges and state universities nationwide and includes 30 governing systems.

Larson says Alpha Phi Alpha was not targeted

by CHRIS SEPER
Campus editor

University police say they have not singled out or mistreated members of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc. during the current investigation of alleged hazing by the fraternity.

"I got information (on Alpha Phi Alpha) and I didn't get information on anybody else," Campus Police Chief Tom Larson said. "I had no idea that anything was going on. I'm not singling out anybody. If I don't get information on anything, I'm not investigating anything."

The fraternity has been serving an interim suspension since a raid on an off-campus apartment Jan. 31. The raid was part of an ongoing investigation, which began in January by the student activities office, the State's Attorney's Office and campus and local police.

• Alleged incident may not be discussed at National Panhellenic meeting. See story page 7.

Ron Zinnerman, president of Alpha Phi Alpha, has refused comment since Feb. 1, when he said the fraternity was not guilty.

A hearing regarding the alleged hazing could occur sometime this week, Larson said.

Questions concerning treatment of the Alpha Phi Alpha members surfaced, after members Darris Brown and Larry Drake were taken to the Charleston Police Department for identification purposes after the Jan. 31 raid. Although the members were not arrested, the two men were handcuffed.

Handcuffing is a city policy when transporting anyone in a police vehicle, Larson said.

"That's for the safety of everybody," he said. "It's nothing to do with the charges or anything."

Another new twist in the Alpha Phi Alpha hazing investigation was the university press release issued to the area media, including a fax to WCIA television in Champaign. No press releases were distributed during investigations of Sigma Tau Gamma and Phi Sigma Kappa fraternities, which are now banned from the university.

"It depends on what the nature of the item is," said Shelly Flock, director of information. "If something is immediate, we choose to fax. If it's not immediate, we mail."

Sigma Tau Gamma was banned after they were found guilty of hazing in 1990. Phi Sigma Kappa was disbanded in 1986 after a member of Sigma Kappa sorority was found handcuffed naked to a stair railing after a "Pimp and Whore" theme party.

find it kind of unusual.

"I think it should be an issue of concern - what it (the raises) was based on, why these two individuals were singled out and do other people need to be brought up to equity," she added.

Civil service council chair Marsha Moler said she "can't find too much fault" with the amount of the two administrators' salary increases since non-negotiated civil service employees received the same percentage salary increases as non-negotiated administrative and professional employees.

The approximately 330 non-negotiated civil service employees on campus received 1 percent across-the-board salary increases and 1.75 percent market and equity increases. Because of efforts by the human resources department to correct long-standing salary inequities, individual employees received raises up to more than 17 percent.

"It's unfortunate that in these times everyone needs a raise," Moler said. "I'm glad the administration was willing to take care of some (inequities)."

Now that some salary inequities are being addressed, it is important that the administration take actions to ensure starting salaries are fair compared to market and other university salaries, Moler added.

"I would like for them to look at market and things before they set salaries from now on and not create any (inequities)," she said. "That would be a tragedy."

Moler added the council does have concerns, related to salaries, that it is looking into.

"There's just a few things we're looking into," she said. "I'm not at liberty to say (what). But I hope new hiring practices can be come up with ... so inequities are not being created."

Gosselin questioned the amount of the salary increases in light of the 3 percent budget cut-back mandated by the state last month.

"In these tight days ... that administration can get such increases in pay is unfathomable," he said.

"It leads me to believe that these attacks and cutbacks on instruction may not be warranted, that in fact these callbacks are maybe being unreasonably applied in the area of instruction," he added. "One would have to wonder about that. Where does the president find money to make (such) increases in salaries for administrators?"

"I think we just feel they're (administrators) going to do what they want to do," Warren said. "We can gripe and bellyache about it, but they're still going to do what they're going to do."

"At the present time, to give groundworkers a 1 percent raise and a signing bonus and then to turn around and give the administrative staff 7, 8 or 10 percent (raise) doesn't add up with the economy the way it is," he said. "It costs us the same to buy a loaf of bread or a gallon of milk (as it costs administrators)."

Larson

Glenn Williams, vice president for student affairs, said the newspapers "made their own" press releases about Sigma Tau Gamma and Phi Sigma Kappa before university relations could release any information.

The Daily Eastern News has never received a university press release similar to the nature of the Alpha Phi Alpha press release, said Debbie Carlson, managing editor of the News.

"The reason we put it out is because it's important to get facts out so rumors don't circulate," said Art Tate, director of university relations. "My feelings are that we need to get facts out (rather) than get rumors (started)."

One of the main pieces of evidence that allowed the police to obtain a search warrant in the Alpha Phi Alpha incident was a phone call to the Student Activities Office from an anonymous source that alleged hazing, Larson said.

Along with the phone call, the police have an affidavit by campus detective Ron Miller stating he witnessed a fraternity member beating pledges, as well as stating his possession of a videotape of the same activity.

Whether the anonymous caller was lying has become irrelevant, Larson added, since the information has been double checked.

"I don't think there's any question of anybody lying if you went anywhere and observed it," he said, noting the affidavit by Miller. "I believe it makes (the phone call) pretty credible."

Larson denied allegations of the campus police singling out Alpha Phi Alpha, saying the fraternity was the only one the police department had any information on.

"I have no information of any other fraternity or sorority hazing," Larson said. "They (student activities) would have notified us about it the same as this one," he said, adding that the only other hazing the police knew of went on with the Sig Taus. "Every fraternity and sorority is a little bit lacking in their information, I would believe."

Larson added that any greeks defending Alpha Phi Alpha by saying "everybody else does it," is automatically admitting guilt.

Cold snap will continue; snow predicted

by CHRIS SUNDHEIM
editor

Despite near record mild conditions last week, Charleston residents can expect colder temperatures to continue through the week with a chance of snow as early as Monday, said local weather observer Elias Price.

Price said typical mid-winter weather will prevail through most of this week with slightly below average precipitation.

"It's February again," Price said. "We must not get our hopes up...we'll see much more average temperatures now. After all, February is still a winter month."

He added that the usual range of temperatures for this time of year is with a low of about 22 degrees and daytime highs near 30 degrees.

Sunday's morning low was 22 degrees, Price said. The weekend of low temperatures followed Friday afternoon flurries that amounted to only a smidge of an inch and evaporated quickly. Price said more flurries can be expected Monday.

"I don't foresee much more than the flurries," Price said. He added that residents may see daily highs getting progressively warmer towards the middle and end of the month.

"Temperatures will begin to go up a little more rapidly," Price said. Towards the end of the month, they'll really begin to moderate."

Long-range forecasts for the next 30 days released last week call for near normal conditions with below average precipitation, Price said. February usually produces about four inches of snow, he added.

Last Monday's mild conditions, which gave Charleston a 65-degree high, tied a previous record set in 1931, Price said. Most of those warmer temperatures came from the southern states, but not from the Gulf of Mexico, which often supplies the midwest with blasts of moist warm air and higher temperatures.

It is that lack of moisture-laden gulf air that will likely keep this month drier than usual, Price said.

Price also said the dome of cold air that produced the weekend cold snap has moved on further south.

"The cold air that went through here is now over Florida and they are seeing very much lower temperatures than usual," Price said.

Senate members worried about resurfacing strife

student government editor

With the Student Government elections months away, members seem split on whether internal problems will resurface within the organization as a result of the election.

"I think it's too soon to tell," said Student Body President Martha Price. "I mean there may be some differences of opinion and some competitions there between the two parties, but I don't see it interfering with the duties of Student Government or Student Senate."

However, some members said problems may resurface.

"All the internal problems began with the speaker (of the senate) elections," said senate member Shelly White. "The problems have already happened and I would bet money that more problems will happen. Things have just cooled off but the fire is still there."

Problems first plagued the Student Senate following controversies surrounding the speaker of the senate elections held last fall. The major controversy surrounding the speaker election started when senate member Dan Kirk's absentee vote was not counted. Kirk later found out through a leak in the confidential vote for speaker that Blake Wood, who ran against current speaker Tony Wielt, had lost by one vote, 14-13, not including Kirk's vote.

Problems continued within the organization after Brett Gerber, who had served as chief of staff for fall 1991 and had to be reappointed and reapproved for the spring semester, was rejected as chief of staff by the senate on Jan. 8 by a 13 to 9 vote, two votes less than he needed.

However, Gerber was approved to the post again two weeks later by a majority voice vote after the five members who were absent on Jan. 8 were present at the meeting. Gerber said the reason he wasn't

The problems have already happened and I would bet money that more problems will happen. Things have just cooled off but the fire is still there.

Shelly White

approved at first was because he supported Wielt in the senate election. He said some senate members who were in support of Wood were unhappy with the senate election, and all of the people who voted against him were for Wood.

But Wood and several other senate members said Gerber was voted down the first time because of a failure to perform his duties and not because of the speaker election. However, problems continued to surface within the organization after former senate member Curtiss Cline resigned because he said he was taken off leadership positions is the organization because of favoritism. Wielt and Price denied the allegations by saying the most qualified people were selected for leading positions.

Some members blamed unnamed parties within the organization for the past divisions in the senate.

"Basically the divisions came from when there were rumors of another party," said member Jenny Rank.

"I think a lot of it has to do with the elections in the spring (April 15)," said member Lillian Marks. "Things have been going down since last semester. "From what I understand, there were people who were backstabbing their so-called friends to run for the elections.

So far, two unnamed and unofficial parties will run in the April 15 Student Government elections. One party consists of Dana Wulff, who said she will run for chief of staff on the same party as members Amy Jobin, who will run for executive vice president, Brian Riordan, who will run for student body president, Tony Wielt, who will run for Board of Governors student trustee, and Apportionment Board Chair Ron Carmona, who will run for financial vice president.

The other party may consist of former Hispanic Student Union president Jay Martinez and Mark Stovall, a senior economics major.

"I'm running for a senate position," Stovall said. "We are going to have a meeting this week (for the party). We're going to try to get about six (party members) for the executive positions and try to get 16 running for senate positions."

Stovall said he thinks Martinez will run for student body president, but Martinez would not comment on that.

"I think the worst of (the problems in the senate are) behind us," Price said. "It's time to concentrate on the positive and become more productive."

Even though several members agree that problems in the senate have calmed down, others still insist that internal problems within the organization will resurface.

"I'm trying real hard to stay independent and it's not always easy to do," said member Luke Neumann. "I think that what the students needs is for people to stop thinking about what party he's going to run on, what position he's going for or whether he's going to get a tuition waiver. I think things have started to calm down, but I wouldn't be surprised if they heated up again (because of the spring elections).

Gus Bus makes first Friday show

By CASSIE SIMPSON
Activities editor

Students welcomed the Gus Bus back with enthusiasm Friday night when the bus returned to the streets of Charleston to safely transport students to and from local bars.

A total of 275 people rode the bus Friday night and the numbers were about the same Saturday night, said Robin Lyons, Gus Bus coordinator.

"I was surprised," Lyons said. "I wasn't expecting that kind of reaction. I thought it would take a while for word of the bus to get around and for students to use it."

Don Yost, owner of Stix, said he is pleased so far with the program.

"I never got any complaints; I have to assume it went OK," Yost said. "We're going to have to do it for a couple weeks to get a real feel for it."

The Gus Bus program is sponsored by 11 local businesses including Stix, Stu's, Ike's, Mother's, Friends and Company, My Place Lounge, Roc's Tavern, Thirsty's, Ted's Warehouse, Burrito Heaven and The Uptowner and Cellar.

Yost said he is also pleased with the support given to the program by the other 10 sponsors.

"All the people sat down and worked things out; good things happen when that happens," he said. "I'm pleased at this point. Everyone is pulling together and that's great."

The bus started its route at 9:30 p.m. at Carman Hall and ran until 2 a.m. The bus stops at the following locations along its route: Carman Hall, the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union, My Place Lounge, Burrito Heaven/The Uptowner, Roc's Tavern, Thirsty's, Ted's Warehouse, Mother's, Friend's and Company, Stix/Stu's/Ike's and then the begins again at Carman Hall.

Lyons said the only problem with the bus route is that it took longer than was initially expected.

"We're going to try to make the route exactly one hour," Lyons said. "So it will be at the same place every hour."

For instance, the bus will start at 9:30 p.m. at Carman Hall and will be back at Carman Hall every hour.

"It's so students will know where it is at and when they can get on it," Lyons said.

However, during the schedule from 1 a.m. until 2 a.m., the route will differ by not hitting all of the initial locations. Lyons also said the bus will try to accommodate its riders by dropping them off closer to their residence halls.

Lyons said the Gus Bus will run from 9:30 p.m. to 2 a.m. Tuesday night because there are no classes Wednesday.

Court television provides viewers entertainment

As the Jeffery Dahmer trial continues, many Americans sit in front of their televisions witnessing the event themselves.

Americans sitting by their televisions are mesmerized by the horror of details of the gruesome murders and mutilations Dahmer committed.

Many of the details of the cannibalistic murders make it sound like a horror movie. The descriptions make the murders sound unreal.

But one sad fact remains. Those murders actually occurred and there are victims to prove it.

Editorial

The families of those victims suffer each day as the facts of the case are thrown to the media for daily coverage.

Sensationalism in the media has escalated with the installation of Court TV. We can watch the courts' events unravel right before our eyes. We can be our own judges in our very own living rooms.

While Court TV has informed the public, it has also turned into a form of entertainment.

Throughout the Kennedy-Smith rape trial, the media covered the event by giving every last detail of the alleged rape.

People were glued to their televisions as the victim and Ted Kennedy Jr. described their versions of the incident. At times, it seemed like an ongoing soap opera.

People would pick up the newspaper and turn to the Kennedy-Smith trial coverage to read about the details of the continuing saga.

Although both the Kennedy-Smith and the Dahmer trials are newsworthy, people need to remember that these are not unrealistic tales of sex and murder, but are real-life occurrences.

People need to remember the victims in the cases, as well as the families of those victims have a right to privacy.

Instead of viewing the trial events as a form of entertainment, we should look at these events as a tragedy of our society. We should look at these events and see the reality of what is happening around us. The trials are not continuations of "Silence of the Lambs" or "Days of Our Lives," these are real life events and should be treated as such.

These are women with traditional values

I realized after watching the Miss USA pageant the other night that men should be struck by not only the beauty of all these lovely ladies, but the talent as well. Contests like these really provide an inspiration for good clean American values.

These women were judged by outstanding members of the community in three categories: The evening gown category; the swimsuit competition; and the question and answer round, where knowledge reigns over beauty. When the finalists were narrowed down to three, two of them were put in the "Cone Of Silence" and each was asked an identical question. "If you could change anything about yourself, what would it be?"

And all the girls gave a candid answer to the question: "I wouldn't change a thing, honest."

The neat thing about these competitions is that they give men a chance to see another side of fifty beautiful women who wouldn't talk to us if they were blind drunk.

We get a glimpse at what it is to be a modern woman. These girls aren't just pretty faces, but talented, vibrant and intelligent individuals with bright ideas. They are real, not like those busty masturbatory aids on MTV.

I know most feminists would condemn these pageants as being nothing more than food for the male libido.

And sure, an argument can be made for that. Some, beautiful women are seen as sex objects - devoid of offering mankind anything more than a good time. But I disagree. A woman can be sexually attractive and professional at the same time. A woman can be beautiful and ambitious, and that's alright with me. But enough about Gennifer Flowers.

The thing I really wanted to get across is this: These women should not be condemned by their less attractive peers, because in their own way they are doing great things for the feminist movement as well. These girls are rewarded for their wholesome traditional values.

And the question-answer portion shows us a side of those fine Christian women that we might not see if they, say, appeared in Playboy.

Tough current events questions are thrown at the women, who have to formulate totally unprepared answers.

World Affairs: "Who's the most oppressive dictator you know and what Middle East country that was recently devastated by the American troops in Desert Storm (applause) does he rule?"

Politics: "Who's the best-dressed politician in government today?"

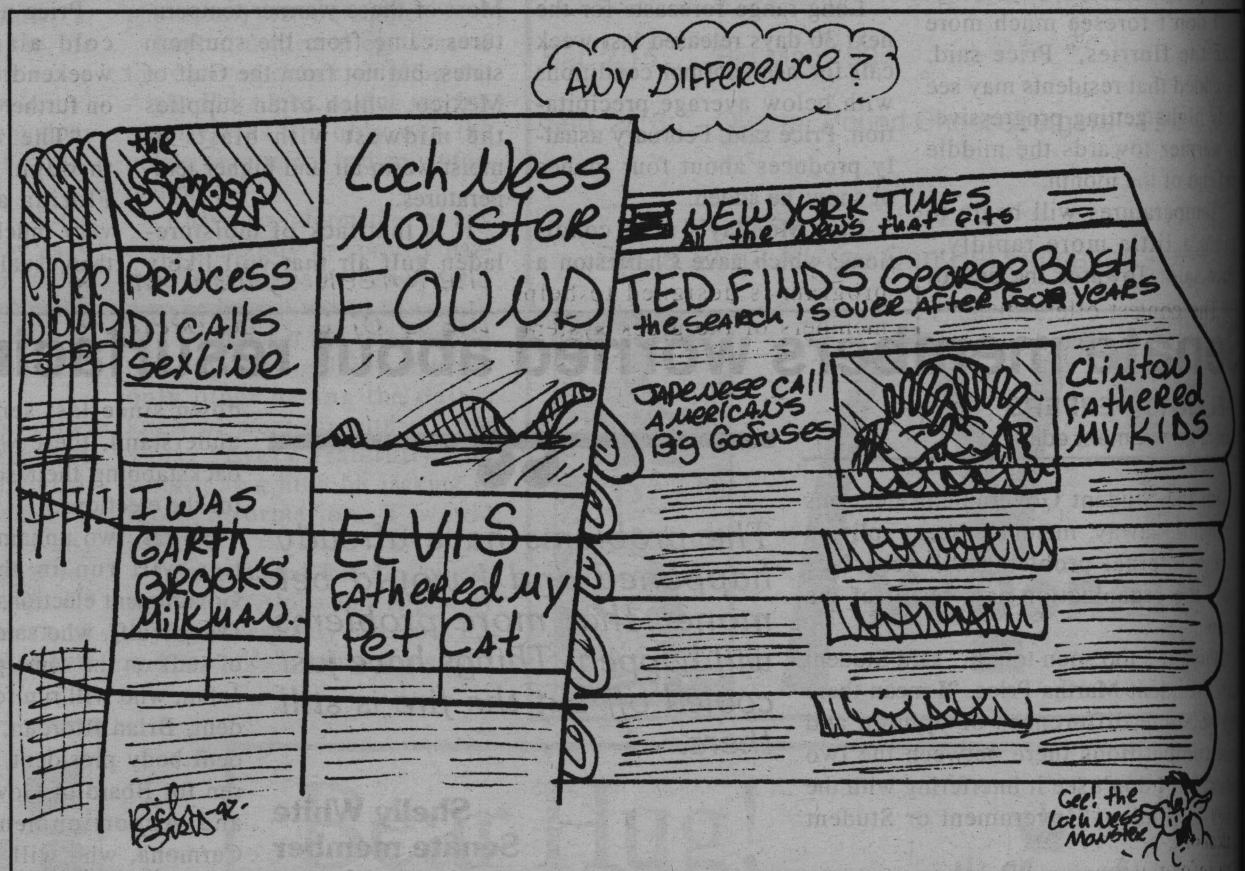

Religion: "Why are all other religions other than Christianity bad, and how in afterlife does Christ plan to punish those godless blasphemers who don't conform?"

American values: "If your mother spoke subversive words against our president, how would you react?"

So you see, these competitions aren't another attempt to cheapen the value of women in American society. Instead, they show men beautiful, intelligent women who extol the wholesome values which make us the best country of all. An inspiration to everyone.

The judges were faced with a tough choice. They had to pick from so many talented women, but my friends, think that in the end they made the right choice by picking Miss California.

Your turn...

Reader: You get what you deserve

Dear editor:

When I read the article written by Jamie Riley on the subject of the death sentences I learned a few things I didn't know.

First, its not Richard Janes, its Ronald Janes. If you are going to write a story please get the names right.

Second, you state that "sending Richard to the pearly gates with his parents will not bring his parents back." You are correct that this will not bring Frosty and Una back, but how do you know that "Ron" Janes is going to heaven? Do you have some inside track to fate?

You say that "the night that the four needles infiltrate Richard Janes' skin...a piece of each of us will lay in the bed with him, struggle for our last breaths..."

My struggle was when I think of how his parents were killed. How it would feel to have your child, which you have raised to the best of your ability, cared for, held when sick, worried when came home late, beating and stabbing you to death.

Lastly you state that we should save these people to have psychologists study them and determine what makes them different. What do we consider "different?" If (Jeffery)Dahmer wears his watch on his right arm does this make everyone who wears their watch on the right arm a murderer? Who is going to pay for this type of study? Do you think a psychologist is going to donate his or her time for the cause? Talk about expenses!

I knew Ron, we grew up in the same area, I would have never guessed he would have been capable of doing such a heinous crime. Capable of stealing, forgery, and just plain laziness, yes.

I personally knew Ron's mother, she was always giving her time to help out at the local Senior Citizens Center and the nursing home. She was one of the most caring, loving people I have ever known.

When I think of what Ron did all I can say is, you get what you deserve.

Letter policy

The Daily Eastern News encourages letters to the editor concerning any local, state, national or international issue.

Letters should be less than 350 words. For the letter to be printed, the name of the author, in addition to the author's address and telephone number, must be included.

Anonymous letters will not be printed.

If a letter has more than three authors, only the names of the first three authors will be printed.

City officials to discuss 911

By CHRIS SUNDHEIM
City editor

City officials will assemble Tuesday to discuss the further possibility of establishing a 911 emergency response system in Coles County.

A 6:30 p.m. meeting in the Gritti Room of the Sarah Bush Lincoln Health Center has been set, said Roger Rives, Charleston public property commissioner and one of the chief investigators of the system.

Rives said the main purpose of the meeting is to inform other city agencies that would be involved in establishing and operating a 911 system.

Although Rives said he will seek input on the system from employees in various emergency services, including paramedics, hospital workers and fire and police department officials, the meeting is open to the public.

Representatives of Illinois Consolidated Telephone Company and the Illinois Commerce Commission will be among those present at the formal discussion, he added.

The ICC is the state body that must certify all 911 systems, Rives said.

He said last month that any system in place would also have to be run through ICTC, and the expense of installation and operation would likely be attached to residents' phone bills.

Rives and Charleston Fire Chief Tom Watson have been investigating a system for more than six months. In informal discussion at a recent Charleston City Council meeting, Watson said the estimated cost of any system would break down to less than $2 per phone line at no direct cost to the city.

Rives said last month that the county could use existing facilities to house the system and would not need to consider any new construction for it.

Rives also said a system could be in place for Coles County as early as spring 1993 if they are successful in placing the matter on a countywide November referendum. He added that this upcoming hearing was the next step in setting a referendum.

The county will consider installing an "enhanced" 911 system that would allow emergency dispatchers to determine the caller's location by tracing the phone line if the caller is unable to give a location verbally. Rives said he hopes the county will consider the installation of the "enhanced" system.

"If we go with any system, I think it'll be an enhanced one," Rives said.

Rives, a urologist at Sarah Bush Lincoln Health Center, is the commissioner in charge of public property, the fire department and the ambulance service for the Charleston City Council.

Contest will raise alcohol awareness

By DAWN SCHABING
Staff writer

The U.S. Office of Substance Abuse Prevention has launched a "Put on the Brakes" contest in an attempt to bring about awareness of alcohol problems on college campuses.

The contest offers students the chance to have their work published and distributed nationwide. Students will also be given the opportunity to win cash prizes while developing materials that will help others, according to a release by the office.

Students, as well as any student organizations, are eligible to create and submit alcohol prevention materials for cash prizes.

Prevention materials receiving the awards will be used in the production of a "special issue" newspaper dealing with alcoholic problems, as well as an informational prevention handbook and an alcohol prevention poster.

First place winners from the newspaper and booklet divisions will receive $1,500, while second place will receive $900 and third will earn $600.

The alcohol prevention poster contest will offer $500 for first place and $300 for nine runners-up, according to the office.

Entries will be judged on creativity, originality, accuracy of information, wit, impact, message retention and overall effectiveness, the release stated.

Winning entries will be published and distributed nationally by the Substance Abuse Prevention Office and the National Clearinghouse for Alcohol and Drug Information.

There are no limits on the number of entries, which can be submitted by a student, organization or college, the release stated.

Information concerning the contest can be attained at 1-800-487-1447.

Greek Peer Assistance helps greeks get closer

By CASSIE SIMPSON
Activities editor

Many students turn to their peers instead of a guidance counselor for help with personal problems, but a new program started by Kevin Dwyer may help students help themselves.

The Greek Peer Assistance program is designed to help members of the greek system become closer while providing assistance to any members who may be suffering from problems such as substance abuse, date rape, stress, time management and depression, Dwyer said.

Dwyer, a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon, said he got the idea for the program while attending a Boosting Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students Regional Conference.

"I got this idea last spring at a BACCHUS conference at Quincy College from the Greek system at the U of I," Dwyer said. "I've been taking steps to establish this program since last September."

The program will consist of nominated members from each sorority and fraternity who are interested in helping their peers deal with behavioral problems by becoming a Greek Peer Adviser.

"They will be trained in order to recognize and identify symptoms of behavioral problems and be able to confront the person in the initial stages and help them," Dwyer said. "They (adviser) will be able to advise them or help them seek counseling before it's too late."

Dwyer said the program focuses mainly on the Greek system and will involve about 50 people.

The program is funded through a federal grant, the Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education, which runs through October 1992 and is advised by Pat Babich-Smith from the Guidance and Counseling Center.

People interested in becoming an adviser need to be approachable, a reflective listener and must be willing to help others and their chapter, Dwyer said.

The adviser will be required to meet with other greek assistants from Eastern's greek chapters and schedule one-on-one meetings with Babich-Smith, he added.

"This program allows for more interaction among Greeks," Dwyer said.

Dwyer has contacted the Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Council and Eileen Sullivan, director of Student Activities/Greek Affairs, about the program.

"I've gotten a tremendous amount of support from everyone I've talked to," Dwyer said. "Anyone interested in becoming a greek peer adviser needs to contact their chapter's IFC or Panhel delegate."

"I've got two members from Sigma Phi Epsilon, one member from Delta Zeta, one from Delta Sigma Phi, two from Phi Sigma Sigma and one from Kappa Delta Rho that are interested and have signed up," Dwyer said. "I think it's a great program and it's going to work well on this campus. We've got a lot of resource people willing to help get this program off the ground."

A WEEKLY COLUMN BY ROBERT HENNINGS

TURNING BACK THE PAGES

Editor's note: These columns were prepared by history Professor Robert Hennings with the assistance of graduate student Marcia Steward. In commemoration of the university's upcoming 100th anniversary and the recent 75th anniversary of The Daily Eastern News, Hennings' weekly column will take us back to what was happening this week on campus 75, 50 and 25 years ago.

75 years ago, Normal School News
Feb. 13, 1917

The girls at Pemberton Hall were given a thrill Sunday when a man entered the parlor unannounced, and making himself at home, sat down upon the piano stool and in a disconnected way attempted to entertain those present. A few young men were present, and examining him rather closely and deciding that he was either insane or drunk, escorted him to the door.(sic) He had left Pemberton Hall and started north when a member of the police force met him and took him in custody.

We learn that a Business College is soon to open in this city. Knowledge of short hand and typewriting helps many students to work their way through college. Some of our students may be able to take a short course during the summer.

50 years ago, Eastern Teachers News
Feb. 11, 1942

In keeping with the present war-time program, Eastern will do her part towards speeding up education this summer by having two five-week summer terms instead of one regular eight-week term of previous years.

This will give the young men of draft age a chance to get more education in a shorter space of time.

President R.G. Buzzard received a letter from the Ninth Naval District headquarters at Great Lakes last week, requesting information on Eastern's possible facilities should the navy decide to incorporate the college in its naval training program. The letter was part of a general survey of educational institutions and asked information regarding dormitory space, equipment, instructors, etc.,

25 years ago, Eastern News

Jim Edgar, junior from Charleston, was elected Student Body President over two other opponents in last Thursday's election.

Edgar, who is currently finishing a term as Student Body Treasurer, received 660 votes to 300 for Ron White and 238 for Byron Nelson.

Going home presents a problem for many Eastern students who live in Chicago.

In a recent News survey of 50 Chicago students, nearly 85 percent said they take the train when they go home ... Almost all of these, however, had difficulty getting transportation between Charleston and Mattoon.

Overweight? Tense? Smoke too much? Don't turn to Kool cigarettes to relieve the problem as the TV commercial pleads, but rather become a member of the local Run For Your Life Club.

The RFYL Club, under the direction of Tom Woodall, instructor in the physical education department, is a club organized to promote a better respiratory system in men over the age of 30, by jogging at least three times a week.

Eastern opens the first indoor track season in its 68-year history at 3:30 p.m. Saturday when it hosts Southeast Missouri State in the new Lantz Building fieldhouse.

Commenting on the first season, Head Coach Maynard "Pat" O'Brien said, "The reason we have never had indoor track is quite obvious - we did not have a facility. We now feel that we not only have a facility, but one of the best facilities for indoor track."

Alleged incident may not be covered

campus editor

The issue of alleged hazing in Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity Inc. will probably not be discussed in Monday's National Panhellenic Council meeting, said Brinker, the council's adviser.

"As far as I know, they're going to discuss consistent council businesses," Brinker said. "They're not at this time in time going to cover the situation about Alpha Phi Alpha."

Darris Brown, a member of Alpha Phi Alpha who resigned as the council's president, has been replaced by Jorris Qualls. In actuality, Qualls has been slowly easing himself out of the presidential position and letting Brown – the vice president – take over until the alleged hazing incident occurred, Brinker said.

The vice presidential position will be left vacant until spring elections, she added.

Brinker said there is really no issue between the council and the hazing investigation and interim suspension of Alpha Phi Alpha. The media has attempted to build a connection between the National Panhellenic Council when there really isn't one, she said.

Issues that will be covered at the meeting will be the spring elections and revising of a new constitution for the group, she noted.

"(We'll talk about) the revisions by various committees on the council," Brinker said. "Each has a different (part of the constitution)."

The reason for the changes in the constitution is that the current document leaves many generalities on different topics, Brinker said.

The 6 p.m. meeting, to be held in the Martinsville Room of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union, is open to the public.

Teachers spend their own cash for class

CHICAGO (AP) – For more than 25 years Norma Jackson has taught first-graders at Chicago's Mary C. Terrell School, a place where children can briefly escape the poverty plaguing their homes in a nearby housing project.

But poverty is no longer a stranger inside the doors of the nation's schools, where teachers routinely dip into their own modest salaries to buy the materials their students need.

"It seems like most people are thinking teachers are rich," said Mrs. Jackson, who estimates she spends at least $500 of the $30,000 she makes each year on classroom supplies.

"They think teachers are missionaries. I could have become a nun if I wanted to be a missionary," According to a 1990 survey of 22,000 teachers nationwide, the most comprehensive recent analysis of the trend, 96 percent of today's teachers spend their own money on supplies.

In the first half of the 1989-90 school year alone, teachers spent an average of $250 on materials, said Ernest L. Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, which conducted the survey.

"In what other profession are workers forced to purchase the tools they need to do the work assigned?" asked Boyer, in comments accompanying the survey.

All elementary teachers surveyed in Illinois, for example, reported spending their own money on classroom supplies.

Twenty-three percent reported spending less than $100 during the first semester, and 20 percent spent $100 to $199. Thirty-nine percent reported spending $200 to $499, and 14 percent spent $500 to $999. Four percent said they spent more than $1,000.

Linda Matsumoto, spokeswoman for the Chicago Board of Education, said each teacher gets $45 a year by contract for incidental supplies. This money is in addition to supply funds provided for each school and overseen by its principal.

'Da Bulls' skit gives Chicago image problem

CHICAGO (AP) – It began innocently enough: a skit on a popular late-night television show depicting belching, beer-swilling sports fans praising "Da Bulls" and "Da Bears." But the "Saturday Night Live" send-up of fans of the NFL Chicago Bears and the NBA Chicago Bulls is causing serious image problems for city and state tourism officials preparing to unveil a new advertising slogan.

Chicago still combats an image of gangsters. One popular T-shirt depicts a duck in a 1920s suit, a half-smoked cigarette dangling from the side of its mouth, a Tommy gun resting across one arm.

Drawings of bullet holes dot the shirt, which bears the caption "Chicago: Everybody Duck." "People are going from Al Capone ... to 'Da Bears' and 'Da Bulls,'" said Susan Lock, deputy director of the Mayor's Office of Special Events, which oversees the Chicago tourism office.

The Bulls, with an NBA championship last year and strong start this season, especially are eclipsing other drawing cards, she said.

Eastern's balanced attack helped them build a 25-17 lead, but Kenny Williams, the Flames' leading scorer, hit four of his six shots in the first half to lead all scorers with 10 points that helped cut the lead to 27-25 with 3:23 left in the half.

Chris Dillard, who came off the bench to score 11 points, tied the game up for the first time when he pulled up from the baseline and hit a 15-foot jumper.

A Williams lay up with 53 seconds left in the half put the Flames up 33-30, before Curtis Leib hit a pair of free throws to make the score 33-32 at the intermission. Leib connected on eight of nine free throws for the game and finished with 14 points. He also pulled down a game and career-high 10 rebounds.

Eastern led the Flames in just about every category, but the one stat they did not lead in may have cost them the game. The Panthers turned the ball over 25 times to the Flames 10.

"There's no secret to our ballclub," Flames head coach Bob Hallberg said. "We know what we have to do to win. We have to force turnovers."

The Flames came out in the second half and took a 40-38 lead, but Eastern responded with a 9-0 run to take a commanding 47-40 lead.

That's when Hill took charge.

The 6-foot 4-inch guard made one of two free throws and then picked off a pass for one of his six steals and went coast to coast for a lay up that cut the lead to 48-47.

Hill scored the Flames final seven points including a three-point shot from the top of the key and two clutch free throws with 2:16 left in the game.

Steve Rowe poured in 16 points in the second half to keep the Panthers close and finished with 24 for the game. He connected on 12-14 shots from the charity stripe.

Rowe said the team has to forget about the past and start worrying about the future.

"We have to keep our heads up and go from here," Rowe said. "We have to go out and play hard, if we play hard good things will happen."

The men shouldn't be singled out though, as their Lady Panther counterparts have also had a tough time on the road. Barb Hilke's troops have turned in an identical 3-7 road mark including a 1-5 mark in the Gateway Conference. Overall they are 6-13 and 2-9 in the Gateway. Unless the Lady Panthers win all of their remaining eight games, Hilke, who has a 229-141 career record, will have her first losing season in 13 seasons at the Eastern helm.

The Winter Olympics are finally upon us. While the United States usually doesn't fare very well in the Winter games, it's still fun to watch (even if the games are on CBS and ABC's Olympic centerpiece Jim McKay isn't broadcasting them). While I don't know the rules on how the athletes become eligible to compete for their respective countries, I have a big question on what those rules are.

During the USA's win over Italy in the opening round of hockey play, the CBS broadcasters documented how an Italian player, who was full-blooded American, got to play on the Italian team. The guy, whose last name was Stewart, became eligible because his wife's parents were Italian.

What in the hell kind of eligibility rule is that? If I was a great hockey player and liked to eat spaghetti, does that mean I could play for the Italians. What if I was a fan of vodka? Do I become eligible to play on the unified Russian team?

At the same time that Team USA was winning at hockey, the NBA All-Star game was gearing up. They may as well of renamed it to Magic Johnson's last stand. Magic, who was handed the MVP award, did show some flashes of brilliance, even though the word 'defense' was somehow absent, and more than proved that he belonged out on the court. Maybe now he can start fighting that AIDS battle that he promised to do.

An interesting side note: While the West All-Stars were being introduced Naughty by Nature's hit song, "Down with O.P.P." was playing in the background. An ironic song, considering the circumstances of how Magic had to retire.

All of that aside, Magic is still a member of the Olympic team and switching channels between our hockey olympians and the future basketball olympians made me anxious for the Summer games.

It made me wonder who the last two members of the USA Basketball team will be. If I were choosing those final two slots, I would pick the Portland Trail Blazers' Clyde Drexler and Louisiana State University's Shaquille O'Neil as the final two members. Drexler is the best guard in the Western Conference and O'Neil is merely a man among boys for the Tigers.

Wrestlers split Sunday matches

RYAN GIUSTI
Staff writer

Wrestling without two NCAA national qualifiers can put a team at a disadvantage when facing a team as tough as Tennessee-Chattanooga.

The Eastern wrestling team had this out the hard way today when the Moccasins defeated the Panthers 29-12.

In a non-scheduled match earlier in the day, Eastern went up against University of North Carolina-Davidson. The Panthers had no problems with Davidson, winning 52-0. All ten Eastern wrestlers recorded victories in the match.

Eastern is still without the services of its two national qualifiers a year ago, Ray Serbick and Mike Marlow. Serbick, 134, is trying to bounce back from a lymph node infection he suffered two weeks ago. Marlow injured his ribs in a triangular with Northern Iowa and Missouri on Feb. 1. Eastern coach Ralph McCausland said both will begin to start training again this week.

In the Panthers second match of the day, Chattanooga handed them only their third dual meet loss of the season. John Weber, 126, and John Hilke, heavyweight, recorded the only victories for Eastern.

Weber downed Chattanooga's Kerry Fouts 11-2 for a major decision. With the two wins on the day, the junior upped his season record to 12-10. Hilkey won his 16th and 17th matches of the year, pinning Bryant Rogowski of Chattanooga in the first period. Trent Anderson, filling in for Marlow at 142, battled Kevin Emily to a 5-5 draw.

Eastern, which is 8-3 overall, wrestled Davidson and Chattanooga back to back, but McCausland said that fatigue did not play a part in the Panthers loss.

"(Fatigue) did not hurt us,"

McCausland said. "If anything we were had an advantage against Chattanooga."

Senior Mike Layne, who has come on as of late, went up against the fifth ranked wrestler in the nation at 158 pounds, Howard Lankford. Layne gave Lankford a tough match, but lost 10-7. Stan Gress, 190, also lost a close match, 3-2 to John Osborne. In that match Gress assessed a one-point penalty for stalling.

"We turned around and wrestled Chattanooga right after Davidson," McCausland said. "We weren't up for the match like we should have been."

Eastern has a week off before its next meet against Southwest Missouri State. The win against Davidson moves McCausland into a tie for second place on the all-time wins list for an Eastern coach. He needs to win one of the remaining two dual meets to surpass Ron Clinton's 64 wins.

Miller leads Panther track team

BRIAN HARRIS
Staff writer

Although Eastern did not dominate the competition at the Indiana Invitational, a few individuals captured part of the spotlight.

Braidy Miller won his specialty event, the 35-pound weight throw. The competition was so tough that Braidy's brother Brent placed eighth at 57-feet 4-inches, a mark that would win most weight competitions.

"There were a lot of tough throwers competing," head coach Neil Moore. "I'd say that was the toughest 35-pound weight competition yet held in the U.S. this year."

Braidy won the event with one of his last attempts. His winning mark (62-feet 8-inches), although not his best throw this season, was still two feet beyond the official NCAA standard.

Nevin Govan, due to a slight foot injury withdrew from the high jump and triple jump, after placing fourth in the long jump.

"It's not a serious injury," Moore said. "But it's enough to make us concerned, so we we're just playing it safe by keeping him out of the other jumps. I want him to be healthy so he can concentrate on the long jump at Southern next week. He likes the pit there and jumped really well there last year."

Govan set his school record (25-feet 4 1/2-inches) at last year's Saluki Invitational.

Other Panther highlights included Eric Baron and Dan Steele in the mile and 400 meters.

Baron qualified for the mile final by busting a 4:15.99, his best time this season. However, he could not duplicate his effort in the final and ran a non-placing 4:18.50.

Steele, who is only eligible to compete for Eastern in the outdoor season, placed second in the 400 (48.14) as an open competitor.

Bad luck struck other Eastern competitors as Brent Bickhaus, the team's top entrant in the pole vault, along with Tom McDonald, no heighted in Friday's heat. According to Moore, Bickhaus has been suffering from an achilles tendon injury which made it too painful to compete.

Jim Sledge ran his third 7.50 of the season in the 55-meter hurdles, but was narrowly eliminated in the semifinals where he placed fifth.

"Overall, it was a real good meet for us," Panther head coach Ray Padovan said. "Right now we don't want anymore competition because we need the rest." Padovan was referring to when the men and women will be at the Midwestern Classic in Indianapolis Feb. 20-22.

Several people turned in good performances on Saturday. Freshman Jason Wrone swam his season's best in the 200-yard butterfly, Bill Costello turned in a solid performance in the 200-yard backstroke and butterfly competition, and Jeff Moll swam a good 200-yard breast stroke.

On the women's side, Karin Adkins turned in her best score in the one meter diving competition, Delynn Wirth looked strong in the 200-yard back stroke, and Angie Weber improved her time in the 500-yard freestyle.

Renee Scheuer swam a career-best in the 50-yard freestyle with a time of 25.9 seconds and Debbie Habben had another stellar performance in the 1,000-yard freestyle competition.

"Habben did well in that event, but we can't expect her to keep lowering her time everytime she tries it," said Padovan.

In the next two weeks, Padovan hopes to get his team in top condition for the Midwest Classic. "We're hoping to lower our times, but we're going to be doing considerably less in practices because we don't want to overdo anything or get burned out."

Bad breaks, Hill's 23 help keep Panthers in slump

Home court advantage pays off for Flames in 68-67 win

By KEN RYAN
Associate sports editor

CHICAGO — Playing at home sometimes has its advantages and the Flames of Illinois-Chicago will not argue with that after escaping Saturday afternoon's conference match up with a victory over Eastern, 68-67 at the UIC Pavilion.

The Flames used two questionable calls by the referees and 17 second half points from senior guard Brian Hill to pick up the victory and improve its Mid-Continent Conference record to 6-4.

With time ticking down and Eastern trailing by a point, senior forward Dave Olson went up for a shot, but the ball was stripped away by Robert Johnson to preserve the victory with a second left on the clock.

Olson and the Panther bench argued that there was a foul, but the referee's didn't agree.

"He (Olson) said he got fouled," Eastern head coach Rick Samuels said. "I heard the skin contact out there. This is my opinion, but if the shooter is fouled too decide the game, it's got to be called."

Earlier, with 45 seconds remaining in regulation, the Panthers, who fell to 9-10 overall and 4-5 in the Mid-Con, held a 67-66 lead and had the ball. Steve Rowe went up for a shot and the ball rattled around the rim, before Barry Johnson went up and tipped the ball in. The referee disallowed the basket and called offensive goaltending, giving the ball to the Flames.

Johnson fouled Hill with 18 seconds remaining and he sank a pair of free throws to give the Flames the lead for good.

"The breaks haven't been going our way," Samuels said. "Maybe the odds will start to catch up with us and we will start winning some of these type of games."

The Panthers looked to be in for a fine afternoon, jumping out to a quick 8-0 lead, but the Flames would not be blown out. Hill, a pre-season All-Mid-Con selection, drained a three-pointer from the corner at the 16:18 mark to get Illinois-Chicago going.

Rowe's effort not enough to end Eastern's drought

By KEITH FARROLL
Staff writer

CHICAGO — Eastern's Steve Rowe decided it was time to play some ball in the second half against the University of Illinois at Chicago as he poured in 17 of his game-high 24 points in the half.

"I was more determined in the second half — I wanted to step up and help my team," said Rowe.

Throughout the game, he was all around the ball. He grabbed eight rebounds, dished out four assists and had two steals to go along with his 24 points including two for two shooting from behind the three-point arc.

He scored most of his points penetrating to the basket and when the ball didn't go in the bucket, more often than not, a whistle was blown for a foul. He scored half his points from the free throw line.

"That's just stepping up to the line with confidence and sticking the ball in the hole," Rowe said. "I felt good out there tonight and hopefully that feeling is contagious for my teammates."

"I don't think we did a good job containing Steve at all," said University of Illinois at Chicago coach Bob Halberg. "Steve is one of those players you know what he is going to do, but stopping him is very difficult we tried several people on him, but Steve is very good going back to his days at South Shore penetrating and going to the basket. You know what the guy is going to do. We just had a hard time with him tonight."

"He's our key there's no question about it," said Eastern coach Rick Samuels. "When we get him on track, we are a good team and we have chances to win. When we don't get him on track we struggle."

Rowe said one thing that influenced him to step up and take charge was that the team was consistent throughout the 68-67 loss.

"We were playing in spurts and I wanted to be the driving force," Rowe said. "To be out there and pull the team along; that's what a good player does."

Earlier this year, Eastern coach Rick Samuels pencilled senior Eric West in the starting line up for Rowe, but Rowe got the starting job back as West went down with an ankle injury two games ago.

"At first it felt kind of bad (to be benched), but I had to look on the bright side of it," Rowe said. "I thought I could come off the bench and provide some spark for our team. That's what I look for."

"When you just go out and play basketball things happen your way," Rowe said. "I felt in the past I was forcing things and that's not basketball and tonight let the game come to me and the things happened tonight."

Lady Panthers drop fifth straight contest

By KEITH FARROLL
Staff writer

When it rains, it pours.

The Lady Panther basketball team is riding a five game losing streak after dropping a 76-62 Gateway Conference contest to the University of Northern Iowa on Saturday.

Eastern, which is now 2-9 in the conference and 6-13 overall, is currently stands in a tie for ninth place with Northern Iowa in the Gateway. It is 1-5 while playing conference teams on the road.

Eastern coach Barb Hilke said that although her team is having a tough time winning, the girls are keeping their heads up.

"We are still playing because the kids love to play," Hilke said. "They are competitive. They want to win. Nobody gives up. The conference hopes are dashed, that's hard on us. There isn't any give up in the locker room."

Northern Iowa improved its record to 2-9 in the conference and 3-16 overall as it upset Southern Illinois University at Carbondale prior to the Eastern match up.

One of the key stats in the game was that Eastern shot only 38.6 percent from the field while Northern Iowa shot 47.4 percent.

"We played real good offense. We got the shots we need to be taking but we couldn't hit a broadside of a barn," said Eastern coach Barb Hilke. "We shot miserably. It was amazing the score was as close as it was. We are not shooting well enough to win."

The Lady Panthers came out of the locker room at halftime with a 28-26 lead. They held the lead and were only up by as much as three points in the second half before Northern Iowa took over.

Northern Iowa took the lead, 44-43, as Julie Street, who had 15 rebounds and 16 points, layed in a basket. Northern Iowa's Ann Miller followed with a three-point bucket to extend the lead to 47-43.

Eastern's Carolyn Hagerty, who had team-high 18 points, scored the next three points to stay within one point, 47-46, with 11:55 left in regulation, but that was as close as the Lady Panthers would get.

Northern Iowa shot 60 percent in the second half to pull away with the win.

The Lady Panthers jumped to an early 8-2 lead led by junior Sheriel Brown who scored six of those points.

Eastern was up, 12-7, before poor shooting and the lack of rebounding started to cause Eastern problems.

Northern Iowa's Street nearly outrebounded the entire Eastern team as she had 13 boards in the first half and Eastern had 15.

Northern Iowa went on a 11-4 run to take a 20-16 lead, the biggest of the half for them.

Eastern then played a solid five minutes and took the lead back going into the lockerroom up by two points 28-26.

Hilke was pleased with the performance of Brown and Hagerty.

"Sheriel Brown is playing better and better every outing," Hilke said. "She's becoming more and more consistent in there."

"Carolyn Hagerty brought her game up a little bit from the level where it is was two weeks ago," Hilke said. "She was probably trying to do too much to help us win (the last couple games)."

Swim teams sweep pair over Millikin

By MATT MAHARG
Staff writer

Eastern's swimming teams were both successful in their last regular season meet Saturday afternoon. The Lady Panthers, who improved to 9-3, defeated Millikin 120-62 and the men's squad, which improved to 5-8, posted a 110-81 victory.

Road woes nothing new to Eastern teams

With the opening of the Winter Olympics, the NBA All-Star game and yet another tough Panther loss all happening this weekend, there are a lot of things floating around in my mind.

• They say that it is always hardest to win when your on the road. So far this school year, Eastern's two major sports teams, the Panther football and men's basketball squads, have done their best to prove that statement is correct.

After the football Panthers suffered through a 4-7 season that included a mark of 0-6 on the road, the men's hoop team is following in their footsteps. The basketball Panthers are 3-7 on the road and 9-10 overall after losing to Illinois-Chicago 68-67 at the UIC Pavilion on Saturday.

Just how important is it to win on the road? Because of the Panther poor performance away from Lantz Gym this season the only crack the Panthers have at any post-season play is if they win the Mid-Continent Conference tournament at Cleveland State in early March.

Should the Panthers be worried? Yes and no. They should be worried because if they can't win the close ones on the road, like Saturday's loss, they could be seeded in Wisconsin-Green Bay's (who will be the number one seed based on its regular season record) bracket in the tournament. The Panthers shouldn't be too worried about playing the brand-new Cleveland State Convocation Center, because in their three road wins has come in that building.
